IMPEACHMENT IS PRESENTED

Trial of A. B. Banks Set By Prosecutor For Trial June 26

Former Bank President to Face Charges of Insolvency

STATE DETERMINED

Plays Grand Jury Over Asking Dismissal of Indictments

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—The trial of A. B. Banks, former president of the closed American Exchange Trust company here, on a charge of acceptance of deposits knowing the bank to be insolvent was set Thursday for June 26.

"That's my answer to the grand jury," prosecuting Attorney Carl E. Bailey said, referring to action of the grand jury Wednesday in requesting dismissal of indictments against Banks and four other officers of the American Exchange after they had voluntarily appeared before the grand jury.

The grand jury three weeks ago indicted Banks, who was one of the state's financial leaders; John M. Davis, chairman of the board; J. H. Stanley, executive vice president; J. C. Conway, secretary; and R. H. Thompson, cashier.

"The grand jury had no evidence upon which to rescind its action in indicting these bankers," Bailey said, "and I can only conclude members of the grand jury have been subjected to political and financial pressure."

The grand jury report, read in court, said "after careful consideration and careful weighing of the facts, we find we were in error in our first conclusion in returning the indictments."

Bailey would comment no further upon the trial date being set, other than to say he would proceed against the other four men as soon as the trial of Banks is ended.

Banks, in addition to being head of the American Exchange, was president of, or owned, controlling interest in more than 40 other Arkansas banks which crashed last November. The American Exchange and the three insurance companies, the Home Fire and Home Accident, now in receivership, and the Home Life of Arkansas, were affiliated with Rogers Caldwell, Nashville, Tenn., banker, now in receivership with his companies. The Home Life recently was merged with another concern.

New Cotton Seed Rates Discussed

Examiners Recommend Country-wide Selling Basis in Report

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Two examiners recommended to the Interstate Commerce Commission Thursday a new basis of rates for country-wide application on cotton seed and products and related articles.

These proposals would result in increases in the Southeast and in the Mississippi valley and reductions in the Mountain Pacific region and central and trunk line territory.

Rates on imported cotton seed meal and cotton seed cake are now lower than those on the domestic market. These rates would be raised to a level with the home products.

About 250 boys and girls of the county will receive the seeds. This is a movement on the part of the club to encourage the growth of pumpkins, as a food for both man and animal.

Spanish Bull-fight Season Mediocre One

MADRID.—(AP)—The bullfighting season is about one-third gone, but has failed to get out of the morass of mediocrity in which it started off.

An unusually dry February caused it to start earlier than usual, but the unseasonable cold and windy days of March and April did much to diminish interest in bull-fights—and the Spanish national fiesta requires heat and sunshine to make it successful.

May is considered—either with or without reason—as the deadly month in bullfighting. Several of the big heroes of the bull ring were killed in May, which is a busy month for bull-fighters, as it has several important holidays.

Catching Snakes Alive Is Profitable Business

MERRIMACK, Wis.—(AP)—Capturing rattlesnakes alive was Elmer Keitel's hobby when he was a boy; now it is a profitable business for him every spring.

Every April and May for 20 years he has hunted rattlesnakes, bull snakes, blue racers, and spotted adders in the granite bluffs on his farm near Devil's lake state park. He sells live snakes to carnivals, circuses, zoological museums and laboratories and tanned skins to leather manufacturers who use them for women's shoes and purses. He also finds a market for rattlesnake venom, used to make an antidote serum.

Rattlesnakes sell for between $18 and $20 a dozen, bull snakes for $3 apiece, and blue racers for $12 to $15 a dozen. Keitel estimates that he has captured more than 5,000 rattlesnakes during the past 20 years.

Unmasking Gangsters

ATTORNEY GENERAL JOHN J. BENNETT, JR., of New York, has very little use for the current effort to paint the city gangster as a bold, capable and efficient superman.

Mr. Bennett went into Greene county, in the Catskills, after Jack "Leggs" Diamond had been shot down while promoting his racketeering enterprises there. After looking into things thoroughly, he had this to say:

"Here in Greene county we have found Jack Diamond and his gang to be the cheapest sort of cowards. And all of them everywhere are nothing more."

Diamond has admitted, from time to time, that he is a great man. Mr. Bennett, studying the man's record, called him "a cheap, boasting criminal with no courage, a man who gained power only because his thugs spread fear."

So much for Diamond. Turning to the larger problem of gang outlawry in general, Mr. Bennett declares:

"Racketeering has grown in seriousness to a point where there can be no more delay in stamping it out. It must be dealt with now and dealt with finally. We have found that Diamond had laid elaborate and amazingly vicious plans to prey on every legitimate enterprise in the Catskills."

Mr. Bennett's summary is admirably concise. It ought to be repeated in every city in the land; for it emphasizes two very important truths:

The most important one is the second—that racketeering has grown to an unbearable extent and must be driven out of existence at once. There is no sense in underestimating the menace that it holds for American institutions. It is outlawry on a greater scale than we have ever had it before.

But there is a lot of comfort in Mr. Bennett's other truth—that the gangster is a coward and a rat. Why has it taken us so long to realize this?

It should have been self-evident. The gangster's favorite way of killing a rival is not by fair fight, as was the case with our western outlaws; it is the shot in the back, delivered by treachery. He gets frightened easily. Every big city has reporters who have exposed gangland's activities—and not one of them has been harmed. Nobody molested Mr. Bennett in the Catskills. Pat Roche in Chicago has never been hurt. The federal officials who took the Capone gangsters into court for income tax frauds have not been molested.

The job, in other words, isn't nearly as hard as it looks. All it takes is courage and ability. Any city whose prosecutors and police officials have those two qualities can quickly drive all of its gangs to cover.

Dark Hours in Europe

OSWALD GARRISON VILLARD, editor of The Nation, is not exactly an optimist but certainly he is an intelligent pessimist. He has just completed a visit of eight months in Europe studying conditions as he saw them. "What does one make of it all?" he asks and answers thus:

"Primarily the gravity of the situation and the dangers which overhang Europe stand out in my mind: the economic and financial chaos on every hand, the bad psychological state of one country after the other. And then the dread spectre of militarism and war looms over all. Everywhere it appears if the present economic system were tottering."

Surely, a gloomy picture and one which we believe is not so greatly exaggerated as one would wish. Villard says one of the foremost German statesmen predicted there would not be a capitalistic government left in Europe in the next 10 years.

Fear, hate, hunger, poverty, the deadly lack of work, the loss of hope—Villard met them on every hand. Upon the bare hills, in the valleys, in the cities, these shadows fall upon the nations. "There are too many fellows running around with rifles in their hands," he says and adds:

"Everywhere nations are helping to impoverish themselves by keeping fellows, often ragged and dirty, with rifles in their hands."

And France is the greatest sinner of them all, Villard says. "The truth is that the French are now as self-satisfied and as smug as were the Germans before the war; their praise of their own culture sounds highly Teutonic," he writes. "More than that, they feel, even at the moment when they proclaim their fear of Germany, that they are in a highly favorable position since they have most of the gold in Europe, while they are developing their colonies as vast military reserves."

Doubtless much, if not all, of what Villard says is true. —Arkansas Democrat.

"Gosh! I'd Like a 'Deficit' of Worries for a Change"

Daily WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON.—George W. Norris, the famous Nebraska grocer, and Victor Seymour, the Republican politician who was the master mind in the plot to defeat Senator George W. Norris by entering Grocer Norris against him in last year's primary, are temporarily free of indictments for perjury. But the evidence on which new indictments against them will be sought is safely embalmed among 995 pages of printed testimony taken by the Nye campaign funds committee in Nebraska.

Grocer Norris, the hearings reveal, besides laying the basis for indictments, also qualified for an award of the fulfilled electric toaster for bright sayings of 1930. Read the hearings and you realize what the country missed when Nebraska didn't send Grocer Norris to the Senate.

Denied He Aided Campaign Seymour's statement—taken after the plot to kill off Norris by entering a man with exactly the same name had collapsed—was clear and concise.

"Have you had any contact with the pending senatorial campaign in Nebraska?" he was asked.

"None whatever," said Seymour.

"When did you first know anything of George W. Norris of Broken Bow?"

"When I saw his filing in the papers."

After Seymour's secretary, Esther Alton, had testified about typing the Grocer Norris campaign statement for Seymour, other witnesses fell over each other in a rush to tell the truth and State Treasurer Stebbins, principal primary opponent of Senator Norris, had to admit that he had given Seymour $50 for the Grocer Norris filing fee and a $500 bond for "campaign expenses."

with which Norris disappeared on a vacation.

Indictments against the pair have been dismissed because a judge found they failed to specify the materiality of the defendants' answers.

Grocer Norris himself had testified that entering the primaries was his own idea, that he had spent his own money and that he had written the statement produced at Seymour's office. He had had no promises of money whatever, he said. Much more entertaining than his subsequent efforts to retract and make it sound nice are some of his recorded ideas on politics and national affairs.

Fought Norris on Hughes

One reason Grocer Norris had said he ought to be elected to supplant Senator Norris was the latter's fight against confirmation of Charles Evans Hughes to be Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. Nye asked him why he felt Hughes should have been confirmed.

"Well," said George, "he has always been active in politics, and he has always been putting in his time that way, and so he was entitled to it if anybody was."

He said he felt he had a good chance to win because the name "George W. Norris" was familiar and Senator Norris was unpopular. Familiarity with an unpopular name would help a candidate "if applied to a different person," he said. He was sure he could popularize the name if given a chance.

As a matter of fact, for years people had been calling him "Senator" as a nickname and he wouldn't feel so strange if nominated and elected. He felt he hadn't been ruled out of the primary he would have forced Senator Norris to have withdrawn, won the primary and then licked Senator Norris in the election.

Huge Magnet in Hospital

STOCKBRIDGE, Mass.—(U.P.)—Mrs. William H. Clarke, wife of a wealthy retired New York paper merchant, decided that two houses and seven farm buildings on her local estate, "Villa Virginia," detracted from the beauty of her Italian-designed summer home. So she gave all nine structures, valued at $50,000, to farmers who agreed to move them away.

Bullet Hits Motorman

SEATTLE.—(U.P.)—Edward E. Deyo, street car operator, was standing beside a metal sandbox when something struck the box, then glanced against his side, hitting his fare report book. At the same time, he heard the sharp report of a gun. Bewildered, he reached into his pocket and found the bullet, flattened by its contact with the sandbox.

Girls Win Phi Beta Kappa Father Gets Condolences

MADISON, Wis.—(U.P.)—When Betsy and Merle Owen, daughters of Prof. and Mrs. Ray Owen were elected recently to Phi Beta Kappa, national honor scholastic society, the professor received two white lilies and a note of condolence from his other daughter, Sally.

The reason, as the note disclosed, was the fact that the professor of engineering at the University of Wisconsin and his eldest daughter are the only members of the family who did not achieve this honor.

Betsy and Merle are juniors in the university. The same honor which fell to them recently was bestowed upon their mother and her sister, now Mrs. J. D. R. Steven, Eau Claire, nearly 30 years ago, the first occasion that sisters had achieved that honor at the same time.

Sally Owen, who was graduated from the university last year, enjoys the reputation of being the only coed who ever jumped from the difficult and dangerous ski slide on the campus.

Some one started the whole day wrong—
Was it you?
Some one robbed the day of its song—
Was it you?
Early this morning some one frowned;
Some one smirked until others scowled,
And some harsh words were passed around—
Was it you?
Some one started the day right—
Was it you?
Some one made it happy and bright—
Was it you?
Early this morning, we are told,
Some one smiled, and all thru the day
This smile encouraged young and old—
Was it you?

California Sportsmen
Migrate to Oregon

PORTLAND, Ore.—(U.P.)—May become California's sportsmen's paradise.

The state Chamber of Commerce reports that from 15 to 20 real estate transactions a day for Oregon property involve Californians. Many of the sales are in Southern Oregon, fishermen's paradise.

Numerous estates along the famed Rogue river are owned by California sportsmen who come annually to enjoy angling in President Hoover's favorite stream. Game abounds in this section.

Some of the California buyers maintain large farms for fruit and dairy cattle. Others build their vacation residences on the very banks of the streams. Through recent legislative action, Rogue river was closed to commercial fishing in the interest of sport.

Motor Carriers Control
Is Asked by Rail Group

WASHINGTON—(U.P.)—Railway executives Thursday had urged interstate commerce commission regulation of motor carriers and action permitting railroads to engage directly in highway transportation.

In a brief filed with the commission by Alfred P. Thom, attorney for the Association of Railway Executives, the officials recommended that passenger-carrying buses and common carriers and contract trucks, except school and hotel buses and taxicabs, be supervised and required to adhere to regulations the same as railroads.

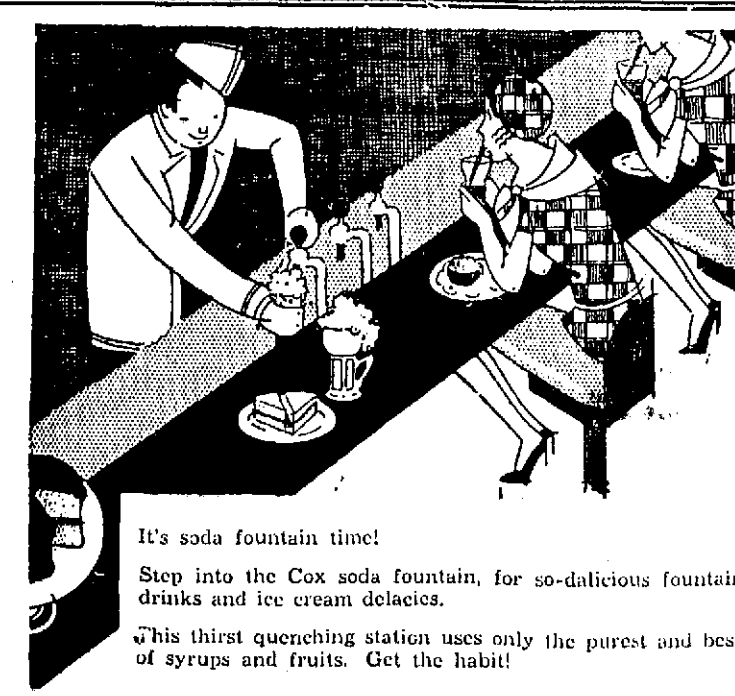

A bill to regulate motor buses failed of passage at the last session of congress.

Miss Belgium

Belgium's challenge to the title "Miss Universe" is pretty Millette Simonin, above, who was chosen by artists because of her school-girl type of beauty. She is on her way to Galveston, Tex., to compete for the title and its $2500 prize in an international beauty pageant there on June 13 to 17.

by the early aristocratic planters, Frank McGinnes, a farmer, was fined $25 for shooting a fox which was running from a pack of hounds.

He has appealed from the police court fine and this quiet little Eastern Shore town is divided over a problem which started in feudal times.

McGinnes is determined to thresh out once and for all the propriety of a law prohibiting anyone from shooting a fox which is being pursued by foxhunters and their hounds. He had been missing a lot of chickens, said McGinnes. When he saw the fox he considered it fair game. To him a fox is a fox and a chicken-killer.

This viewpoint was all right on the Eastern Shore twenty years ago. But now Centerville is the home of John J. Raskob and many wealthy friends, and foxhunting is a gentleman's sport.

Most farmers hereabouts fail to see any sanctity in a fox, whether he is the object of a pack-hunt or not.

Urges Chinese to Print Own Stamps

PEIPING, China—(U.P.)—Y. D. Shen, former secretary to Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang, northern war lord, who recently was appointed director of the bureau of engraving and printing is seeking to cancel a contract with an English firm to print China's stamps.

He argues that the livelihood of 2,000 skilled workmen in the bureau is endangered by the contract. The agreement with the English firm was made during the northern rebellion. Since the rebellion has collapsed and the bureau is capable of printing all the stamps needed by China, Shen says the contract should be cancelled.

One MELODY GIRL

by RUTH DEWEY GROVES

AUTHOR OF "The Husband Hunter," etc.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
Beryl Horden, secretly in love with Tommy Wilson, declares his elopement with her half-sister, Irene Everett, but fails to convince him that it is his duty to finish college.

Irene wants to be a radio singer and is furious when she finds and Beryl succeeds in securing a contract. Beryl's debut wins applause and new friends but she cannot forget her hopeless love
though she goes to gay parties
with the wealthy PRENTISS
GAYLORD. Irene tries to win Prentiss' interest when Beryl becomes ill. He is deceived by her use of childish innocence. Irene uses every wile to force him to a declaration as she has promised to marry Tommy in a week.

Tommy's aunt dies and leaves
him less money than he had expected from the family estate.
Her husband loses some of this by unwise investment but permits
Tommy to keep his job as manager of his theater. Then PRENTISS GAYLORD, the theater and tells Tommy to look for another job.
When Tommy tells Irene his bad luck, she breaks their engagement.

Prentiss asks Irene to marry
him, and she half agrees.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XXVII

TOMMY waited by the gate, longing for a glimpse of Irene, seeing lights in the house and trying to believe that she might be there wishing he'd come, late as it was,
or writing a note to him perhaps.

Behind the curtain of an upstairs room a girl peered out at him. It was not Irene, and he did not see her. The girl's heart was pounding like a trip-hammer as she knelt on the floor beneath the window, the better to see him.

Didn't he know . . . couldn't he see . . .
Then Beryl saw that Prentiss
had parked his car a little beyond the Everett gate. And it was the limousine. Perhaps Tommy did not know that it belonged to the Gay-lords. Beryl thought that perhaps she wouldn't have known it herself
if it hadn't had the same motor as that in Prentiss' roadster. It was too dark under the trees; for her to see distinctly.

But surely Tommy could see—
and know that it was not a car
that belonged to the neighborhood.
Could he see Irene with Prentiss?
Beryl shivered with anxiety as she knelt and watched. No, Tommy couldn't know yet or he would not be whistling in the dark. But if any motor in the night might get out of the car with Prentiss and start for the house. What would happen then?

Beryl was thinking less of the scene that might take place than

of the hurt that would follow for Tommy.

Would Irene care enough not to cause it? Would she wait with Prentiss until Tommy had gone away? Surely she had heard him whistling?

Beryl prayed that Tommy would go away. But he didn't.
He stayed and she . . . and she glowed of no cigarette after another as he lighted them and threw them away after a puff or two at each.
Poor kid, what an awful state he must be in! She wondered if Irene had broken a date with him. Irene had not told her family of the breaking of her engagement to Tommy, but Tommy hadn't been around all that day, or telephoned,
and Beryl was puzzled.

Then it came to her that Irene too was praying he would leave.
This was true enough, except that Irene was turning the occasion to her advantage. When she saw Tommy at the gate she had been fairly petrified for a moment. Before she could think of what to say the stillness around them.

It startled Prentiss. Nervous, he asked sharply: "What the deuce is that?"

Irene sank back in his arms. "It's that silly Tommy Wilson," she said in disgust. "In a minute he'll be screaming her."

"Screaming who?"

"Why Beryl, of course," Irene sighed. "If he only knew how she makes fun of him!"

Prentiss' brows knitted in doubt.
"I thought you said she's crazy
about him," he reminded Irene.

Irene hesitated, seeing she made this error, but excuses, alibis
and explanations were second nature to her. She was soon ready to explain the apparent discrepancy
in her statements.

"Yes," she said lightly, "but you see Beryl is a level-headed person.
She calls most . . . most demonstrations of affection nonsense."

And Prentiss, remembering that he had been unable to fall in love with Beryl, thought that it might have been because she was cold.
Not at all like the warm little kitten in his arms.

He tightened his arms and Irene squealed closer to him. Her sudden melting, which made her safer from discovery by Tommy, seemed fully warranted now that a girl like Beryl had been painted as harsh and unfeeling.

THERE was no doubt that Prentiss was pleased with the change in her mood. He called her all the old love names and even coined new ones. Irene showed no astonishment now, but occasionally she drew away from him for a surreptitious glance to see if Tommy were still at the gate.

It seemed to her a long while before he left. To Prentiss it was only a moment before Irene suddenly insisted that she must go.
Truly she was an enchanting person to hold in your arms. Prentiss was reminded of something a friend had said about modernistic furniture. "I couldn't live with it any more than I could live with an angular woman."

He smiled to think how out of place Irene would be in a geometric setting. He did not at all like to let her go. And he wanted to come early the next morning to tell her parents he was going to marry her.
Irene insisted that it shouldn't be before noon. Then he could take her, she thought, out on the island
somewhere to lunch.

He lingered at the door until she had, by degrees, literally closed it in his face. She did not wait to hear him walk down the porch
steps but dashed upstairs to Beryl's room. The door was open for the room had none too many windows.
Irene paused on the threshold and said excitedly, "Hello, are you awake?"

"Well, if I wasn't I would be now," Beryl answered.

Irene stepped inside the room and switched on a light. Beryl blinked and started to protest but Irene cut her short.

"I've got something to tell you,"
she said, sitting down on the bed.

"Wouldn't it keep until morning?" Beryl asked.

Irene pointed. "Why are you always so cranky with me?"

Her babyish tones nuzzled Beryl, who sat up and stared at her. Irene, the little snip, accusing her of being cranky!

"We could act like sisters once in a while, couldn't we?" Irene went on. "I thought you'd like to know what's happened, but when I came to tell you I get a dig."

"I'll bet it's something you want,"
Beryl said bluntly.

Irene got to her feet. "I've half a notion not to tell you now," she declared. "But I don't have to be mean just because you are," she added, unwilling to forego the pleasure of giving Beryl a jolt.

"No?" Beryl said, and now she was beginning to be amused. Irene could be so unwittingly funny at times, she thought.

"And I guess you'd sleep better too if you knew it," Irene returned with a smirk that gave the remark
a salty meaning.

"Then you'd better tell me,"

Beryl replied, "I'll need a good sleep after this."

SINCE she would not take up the lead thrown her Irene came out in the open. "I know you'll be relieved on Tommy's account," she said lightly, "since you've made it plain enough that you don't think I'm good enough for him. But I'm not sure about it. I think you're right about one thing. I'm not meant to be a poor man's wife. I'd hate it, and poor Tommy hasn't even a job."

She stopped. Beryl was staring at her with a fierceness that frightened her.

"What do you mean—no job?"
Beryl demanded.

"Well, don't blame me," Irene said, shrinking back. "I had nothing to do with it. His uncle fired him."

"Fired him?" Beryl cried. "When and what for?"

Irene shrugged. "I guess he didn't exactly fire him," she corrected, "but it's practically the same thing. Mr. Hoffman sold the theater and Tommy is just naturally out of luck."

Beryl laughed, a broken, mirth-less series of sound. "Just naturally out of luck," she repeated.

"And you're throwing him over because of that—out of luck. I wonder!"

"You would say something like that," Irene replied, jerking her chin into the air.

"Yes, I would," Beryl flared back at her, "and if you don't get out of here I'll say a lot more."

She was thinking of Tommy, whistling at the gate while Irene hid in another man's car a few feet away. It might have been a prototype of it if Irene had meant it that way, but Beryl knew she had done
it because she was as scared as a rabbit.

She'd like to tell Prentiss Gaylord what she thought of him—
taking an engaged girl out and laughing maybe, at Tommy."

Irene was at the door when Beryl called "Wait a minute!" with such commanding earnestness that Irene halted against her will and looked back.

"Did you tell Prentiss that Tommy was looking for you tonight
—that you're engaged to Tommy?"
Beryl shot at her.

Irene did not answer for a few seconds until a little of her self-assurance returned. Then, "Well," she said with a sneering little laugh, "you could hardly expect me to say that I'm engaged to Tommy when I've just promised to marry Prentiss."

North Carolina Man Tells How Black-Draught Helps When His Food Disagrees.

"Black-Draught has been the family medicine in our home for

"When I was a small boy, my

too much, or complained of a pain
in my stomach, mother began treatment with a dose of Black-Draught. I grew up, thinking it was the best medicine on earth,
for, as children, we did not mind
taking it."

"Now, whenever I get up in the morning feeling dull and sluggish,
I take several small doses of Black-Draught."

"My health is very good, and I never have to take much medicine.
Sometimes I get a little 'off' from

HOOKS AND SLIDES

A Puzzle for You
 Perhaps you have seen and remember how people used to follow Jack Dempsey around. But now at the horse track in Louisville the other day Max Schmeling made his way about unhindered by a solicitous throng. They didn't give him a tumble.

In hotel lobbies and other places where people gather for an important transaction as looking at other people, Max was not bothered. Was he recognized? He must have been. His features are unmistakable: it is a face that you cannot forget. He looks just like his pictures.

What's the Answer?
 There were no necks stretched to see him. Throats didn't crowd around him asking him this and that foolish question. He ate his meals in hotel dining rooms, undisturbed. There were no autograph seekers.

What do you make of this, Watson? Have prize fighters lost their lure? Surely the reason cannot be that Max is unpopular; even unpopularity draws crowds. Why was Schmeling neglected? Search me.

Perhaps the answer is the way he won the championship. He was beaten badly by Sharkey for three rounds and was handed the title by a low left hand. In looking at Schmeling do people remember only that he was losing to Sharkey before the mistake which made him successor to Gene Tunney. Jack Dempsey and the others? Again, search me.

Something to Remember

BUT I am beginning to believe that Max is a fighter at that, rather a better fighter than he generally is given credit for being, and I haven't been talking to

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

WHEN an amateur fight show in Chicago can draw 45,000 customers, professional fighters ought to go and ask themselves a few questions. One of the questions might be: "What is the matter with professional boxing?" to which the boxer might reply, "Me." Ty Cobb's son is captain of the Yale freshman tennis team, which must give the old Peach a terrific thrill. George Earnshaw is a good billiard player. . . . Hornsby thinks a lot of Bill Jurges, second baseman who came to the Cubs from a Brooklyn sandlot. . . . after Uncle Robbie sent Rookie John Krider to Hartford, the young man pitched two straight shutouts.

Sam Hall, who is busy over at Cleveland steaming up the fight, either. It should not be forgotten that this chap has indomitable courage. He came from behind to knock out Johnny Risko. He took an early shellacking from Paulino, rallied and won. Who is there to say that he would not have rallied and beaten Sharkey after the Boston sailor man lost his enthusiasm for the task? Sharkey, himself, gives the German at least the credit for courage.

In picking Max to beat Stribling, Sharkey expressed himself the other day of the opinion that Max would start slowly, with Stribling taking the early rounds, but would come forward at the last to beat Willie back.

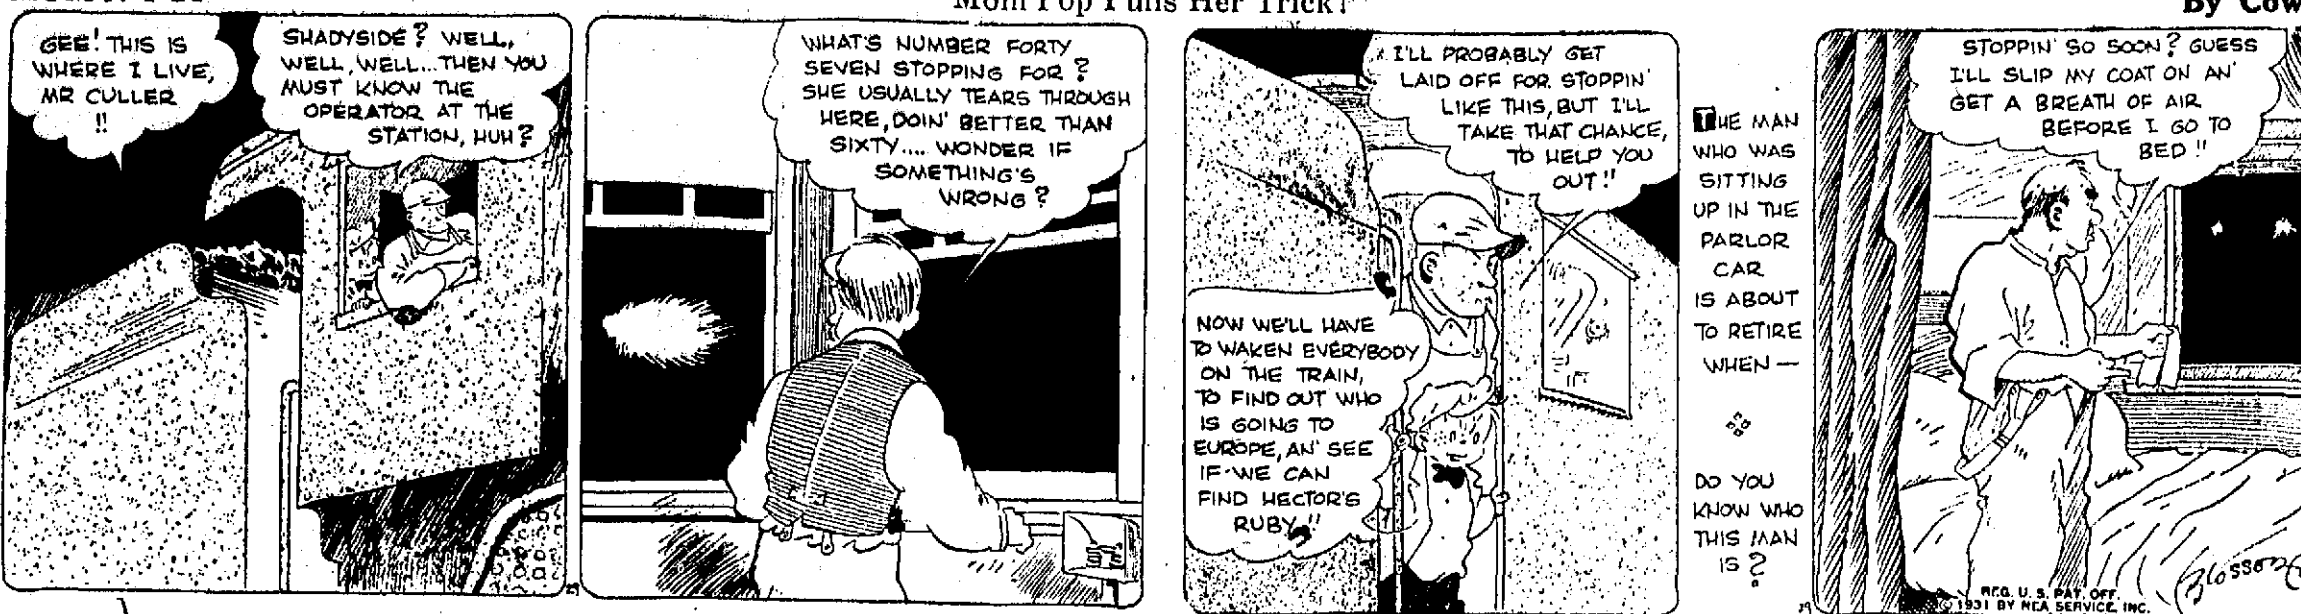

Yet the crowds at Louisville did not give him a tumble. Again, search me.

Mule Breaks Havoc on Farmer's Machine
